

cartographic perspectives

Number 22, Fall 1995

in this issue

MESSAGES	1
FEATURED ARTICLES
Cartography resources on the World Wide Web Jeremy Crampton	3
CARTOGRAPHY BULLETIN BOARD	12
The Cartography Laboratory at Arizona State University Cartographic Laboratories at the University of Georgia Syracuse University Cartographic Laboratory
REVIEWS
Drawing the line, tales of maps and cartocontroversy reviewed by Judith Tyner	15
Mapping the Renaissance world: the geographical imagination in the age of discovery reviewed by David Woodward	16
Mapping hidden dimensions of the urban scene reviewed by Julio Rivera	18
NACIS XV PRELIMINARY PROGRAM	20
NACIS NEWS	23
ANNOUNCEMENTS	24
CARTOGRAPHIC EVENTS	24
ABSTRACTS AND INDEX FOR ISSUES 1-22	25

messages

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

From the point of view of the Executive Director, this last year has not been exceedingly taxing. The business of the executive office is becoming more routine, and we were spared the responsibility of handling registration for the Ottawa meeting. We did, however, collaborate with the editor of Cartographic Perspectives, Sona Andrews, to compile a membership directory, the first to appear in many years. We also produced a program to sort our CP mailing into "bundles" in accord with the requirements of the Postal Service.

For any successes achieved in the last year it is necessary that I credit my colleagues Susan Peschel, the Assistant Executive Director, and Sona Andrews. Susan has worked hard to maintain our membership records in top form and contributes in a major way to all of the other Executive Office functions. Her attention to detail and sense of responsibility have served the organization, and me, very well. Sona's service to NACIS is far above and beyond the already

(continued on page 2)